Investment Approach

Bottom Up, Fundamental

Investment Goal

The Hodges Small Intrinsic Value Fund invests in companies that have an attractive market price relative to underlying asset value, earnings power or the potential for a turnaround in business fundamentals. We also seek companies with mispriced or misunderstood deep, intrinsic value but lacking a near term catalyst to unlock that value, which may require a longer time horizon.

The Fund invests in foreign securities which involves greater volatility and political, economic and currency risks and differences in accounting methods. These risks increase for emerging markets. The fund may also make short sales of securities, which involves the risk that losses may exceed the original amount invested. The fund may also use options and future contracts, which have the risks of unlimited losses of the underlying holdings due to unanticipated market movements and failure to correctly predict the direction of securities prices, interest rates and currency exchange rates. These risks may be greater than risks associated with more traditional investments. Value investing carries the risk that the market will not recognize a security's inherent value for a long time, or that a stock judged to be undervalued may actually be appropriately priced or overvalued.
